marriott center

The home floor for the Cougar basketball team is the J. Willard Marriott Center located on the north side of campus. It is now in its fifth year of BYU activity and several national attendance records have been set in the new facility.

When plans were being drawn up for the center, Dr. Ernest L. Wilkinson, then president of the University, said "For the first time in recent years, devotional messages, commencement exercises and all other major campus events, along with basketball, will be held under one roof for all students." Since its completion on December 3, 1971, it has met that expectation.

Total home attendance figures show that over a four-year period 873,788 fans jammed into the Marriott Center to watch the Cougars play their 52 home games—an average of 16,803 fans per game. The single game mark was set against the University of Utah when 22,987 came to see the contest. That game was just 13 short of 23,000 fans.

The building is the largest arena of its kind in the United States, covering about three acres. The outside dimensions are 280 x 340, or the equivalent of two football fields placed side by side. The roof covers 130,000 square feet, and will enclose 8 million cubic feet. From the playing floor to the top of the roof the height is nearly ten stories.

Seating capacity has been set at 22,768. Of that number 10,000 are chair seats with the balance being bleacher seats. About 60% of the seats are below the concourse level.

While the Marriott Center is generally associated with basketball, it should be pointed out that it has been, and will continue to be used for a wide variety of events and purposes. The building includes offices for the coaching staff and ticket personnel, locker rooms, and facilities for pageants, dance festivals, musicals, and other activities at the University.

centennial year

The Centennial Year celebration at BYU finds the school reflecting fondly on the game of basketball, which is linked closely with the growth of the institution. As a sports activity, a diversion, a training ground or whatever, basketball has been a traditional part of the school's fabric.

In an era when sports is viewed from many different angles, we thought it would be interesting to look at the "where" in BYU basketball, historically speaking.

The introduction of basketball on the BYA campus—it was an academy in its early stages—can't be pinpointed. But it was a going thing in Provo at the turn of the century.

While it is known that the school, plus various clubs on campus, were involved in the game, good historical data is missing. Competition was geared more to geographical proximity than to quality, with neighboring high schools getting their share of games with Academy teams.

For a starting point, it is safe to say that intercollegiate basketball, by some standards, began at BYU with the 1917-18 season. True, the school had basketball teams prior to this date under Coach E. L. Roberts. But this is the date when BYU became a member of the Rocky Mountain Faculty Athletic Conference.

Subsequent conference affiliation included the Mountain States and Skyline Conferences, plus the Western Athletic Conference membership which began in 1962.

Looking at the "where" aspect of the game, the Cougars played their games on the third floor of the Training School building on lower campus from 1918-28. For the big games, the Cougar fans used to find themselves perched in window sills, on ladders and on top of lockers along the sides of the walls. In this manner as many as 700 could be accommodated for a game. And in 1925 the Cougars boasted the tallest player in the conference, Rags Ingersoll, a 6-4 center.

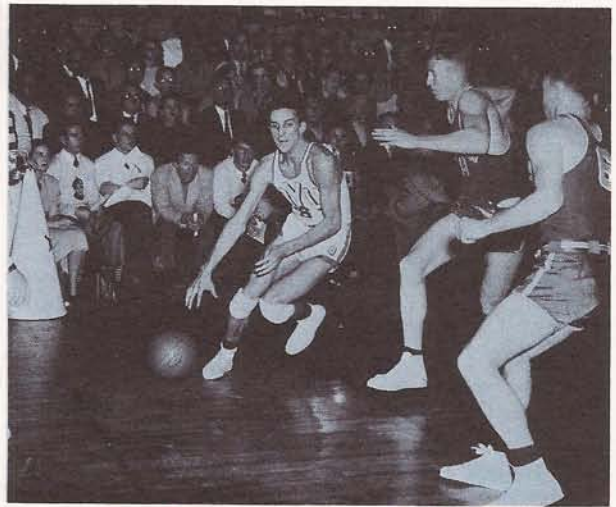

In 1928 the Cougars doubled their seating capacity by moving to the Women's Gym. Changes were taking place in the game, and it was during this period that E. L. Roberts, former coach, championed the change that eventually eliminated the center jump. It was also the era when Provo's local radio station (KOVO) carried one of the first ever broadcasts of a basketball game. It was also the day of the two-handed push shot. BYU also landed its first all-American, Elwood Romney.

An unforgettable chapter in the chronicle of BYU basketball was written between 1946 and 1950, when the Cougars played their home games on the floor of Springville High School.

Built for a crowd of about 1,200, the Springville Gym officials discovered, could actually hold 1,700. They were crunched in an uncomfortable, but the local fans were often too delirious to care.

Despite the obvious handicaps, the Springville Gym was the site for some outstanding basketball. It was a day when fans were treated to the play of Joe Nelson, Mel Hutchings, Roland Minson; Utah's Arnie Ferrin and Vern Gardner; Denver's Vince Boryla; Utah State's LaDell Andersen, to mention a only a few.

They all played in Springville.

Joe Nelson in action at Springville

Forced out of the Springville Gym in 1950, the Cougars began casting about for a temporary floor to be used while the George Albert Smith Fieldhouse was being constructed.

The University of Utah very graciously offered its home floor—the 6000-seat Einer Nielsen Fieldhouse. So for one season, 1950-51, the Cougars had a new home; on a rival's floor 45 miles north of the BYU campus.

Preseason games that year were played in the Springville Gym, but the action moved to Salt Lake City when the Skyline Conference schedule began.

Judging from the overall results, the Mountain Cats didn't suffer much as transients. They split with the Utes 2-2, in games played on the Einer Nielsen floor, captured the MSC title and went on to win the National Invitational Tournament crown in Madison Square Garden.

Not bad for a team dubbed the Homeless Cats.

It was Coach Stan Watts' second year at the helm of Cougar basketball, and it was one of his most talented crews: Mel Hutchins, Roland Minson, Jerry Romney, Harold Christensen, and Joe Richey.

It should be pointed out that the Cougars were used to travel, having toured South America the summer of '50.

After a long wait, the Cougars finally moved into their own arena—the George Albert Smith Fieldhouse (10,200)—in December of 1951. Basketball was just into the golden era for the Cougars, an din the 20 years that followed, the BYU drew large crowds. Coach Stan Watts, who coached every one of the 246 games played there, during that period, scheduled some of the finest teams available for the local fans.

Little wonder, then, that this period of boom is closely associated with Stan Watts. Prior to his retirement in 1972 after 23 years as head coach, Watts' teams won two National Invitational Tournament championships, plus eight conference titles.

In order to meet the growing demand of spectators, the Cougars needed a bigger facility. They got it in December of 1971, when the team opened the new Marriott Center largest on-campus arena in the nation (just under 23,000 seats). The Cougars set attendance records that year, drawing an average of over 21,000 to home games.

Since its beginning in 1918, BYU basketball has had 11 coaches, a long list of All-Americans (data elsewhere in the guide), a record of playing some of the nation's finest, and a tradition that is still in the making.

administration

Brigham Young University's president is 43-year-old Dr. Dallin H. Oaks, who assumed office Aug. 1, 1971. President Oaks, former professor of law at University of Chicago, replaced Dr. Ernest L. Wilkinson who served as president of BYU for a period of 20 years (1951-1971).

President Oaks was born in Provo, Utah (Aug. 12, 1932) a son of the late Dr. Lloyd E. Oaks and Stella H. Oaks. He graduated from BYU in 1954 with high honors, receiving the B.A. degree in accounting and economics. At University of Chicago Law School he received the Doctor of Jurisprudence degree in 1957, graduating cum laude, second in a class of 86, and was named to the Order of the Coif. He was also editor-in-chief of the University's Law Review in 1956-57.

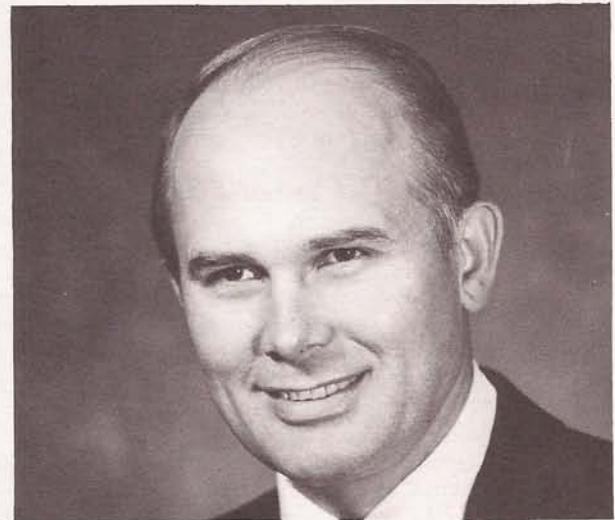

He began an illustrious legal career as law clerk to the Chief Justice of the United States, Earl Warren. A year later he entered private law practice in Chicago (Kirtland, Ellis, Hodson, Chaffetz and Masters). In 1961 he became associate professor of law at Chicago University, and was associate dean from May 1962 to January 1963, serving as dean during the last three months of this period. He was also Assistant United States Attorney of Cook County (1964) and visiting professor of law at University of Michigan Law School (1968).

From January through June 1970 he was on leave of absence to serve as legal and research adviser to the Bill of Rights Committee of the Illinois Constitutional Convention. He became executive director of the American Bar Foundation (1970).

President Oaks has been co-editor, co-author, or author of four books dealing with subjects of church and state, trust laws, operation of criminal courts in Chicago. He has also authored about 30 articles in leading periodicals and other magazines.

An active member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, he served as first counselor in the presidency of the Chicago Stake (district) and was formerly mission president in Chicago Stake.

He married June Dixon of Spanish Fork, Utah, and they have six children: Sharmon, Cheri, Lloyd, Dallin, TruAnn and Jenny June.

the conference

Growing in prestige and influence with each passing year, the Western Athletic Conference will be beginning its 12th year in 1974-75. In the period since its formation, it has established itself as one of the finest leagues in the nation. The eight member schools extend over a period of six states in the Rocky Mountain-Southwest with headquarters in the Denver Hilton.

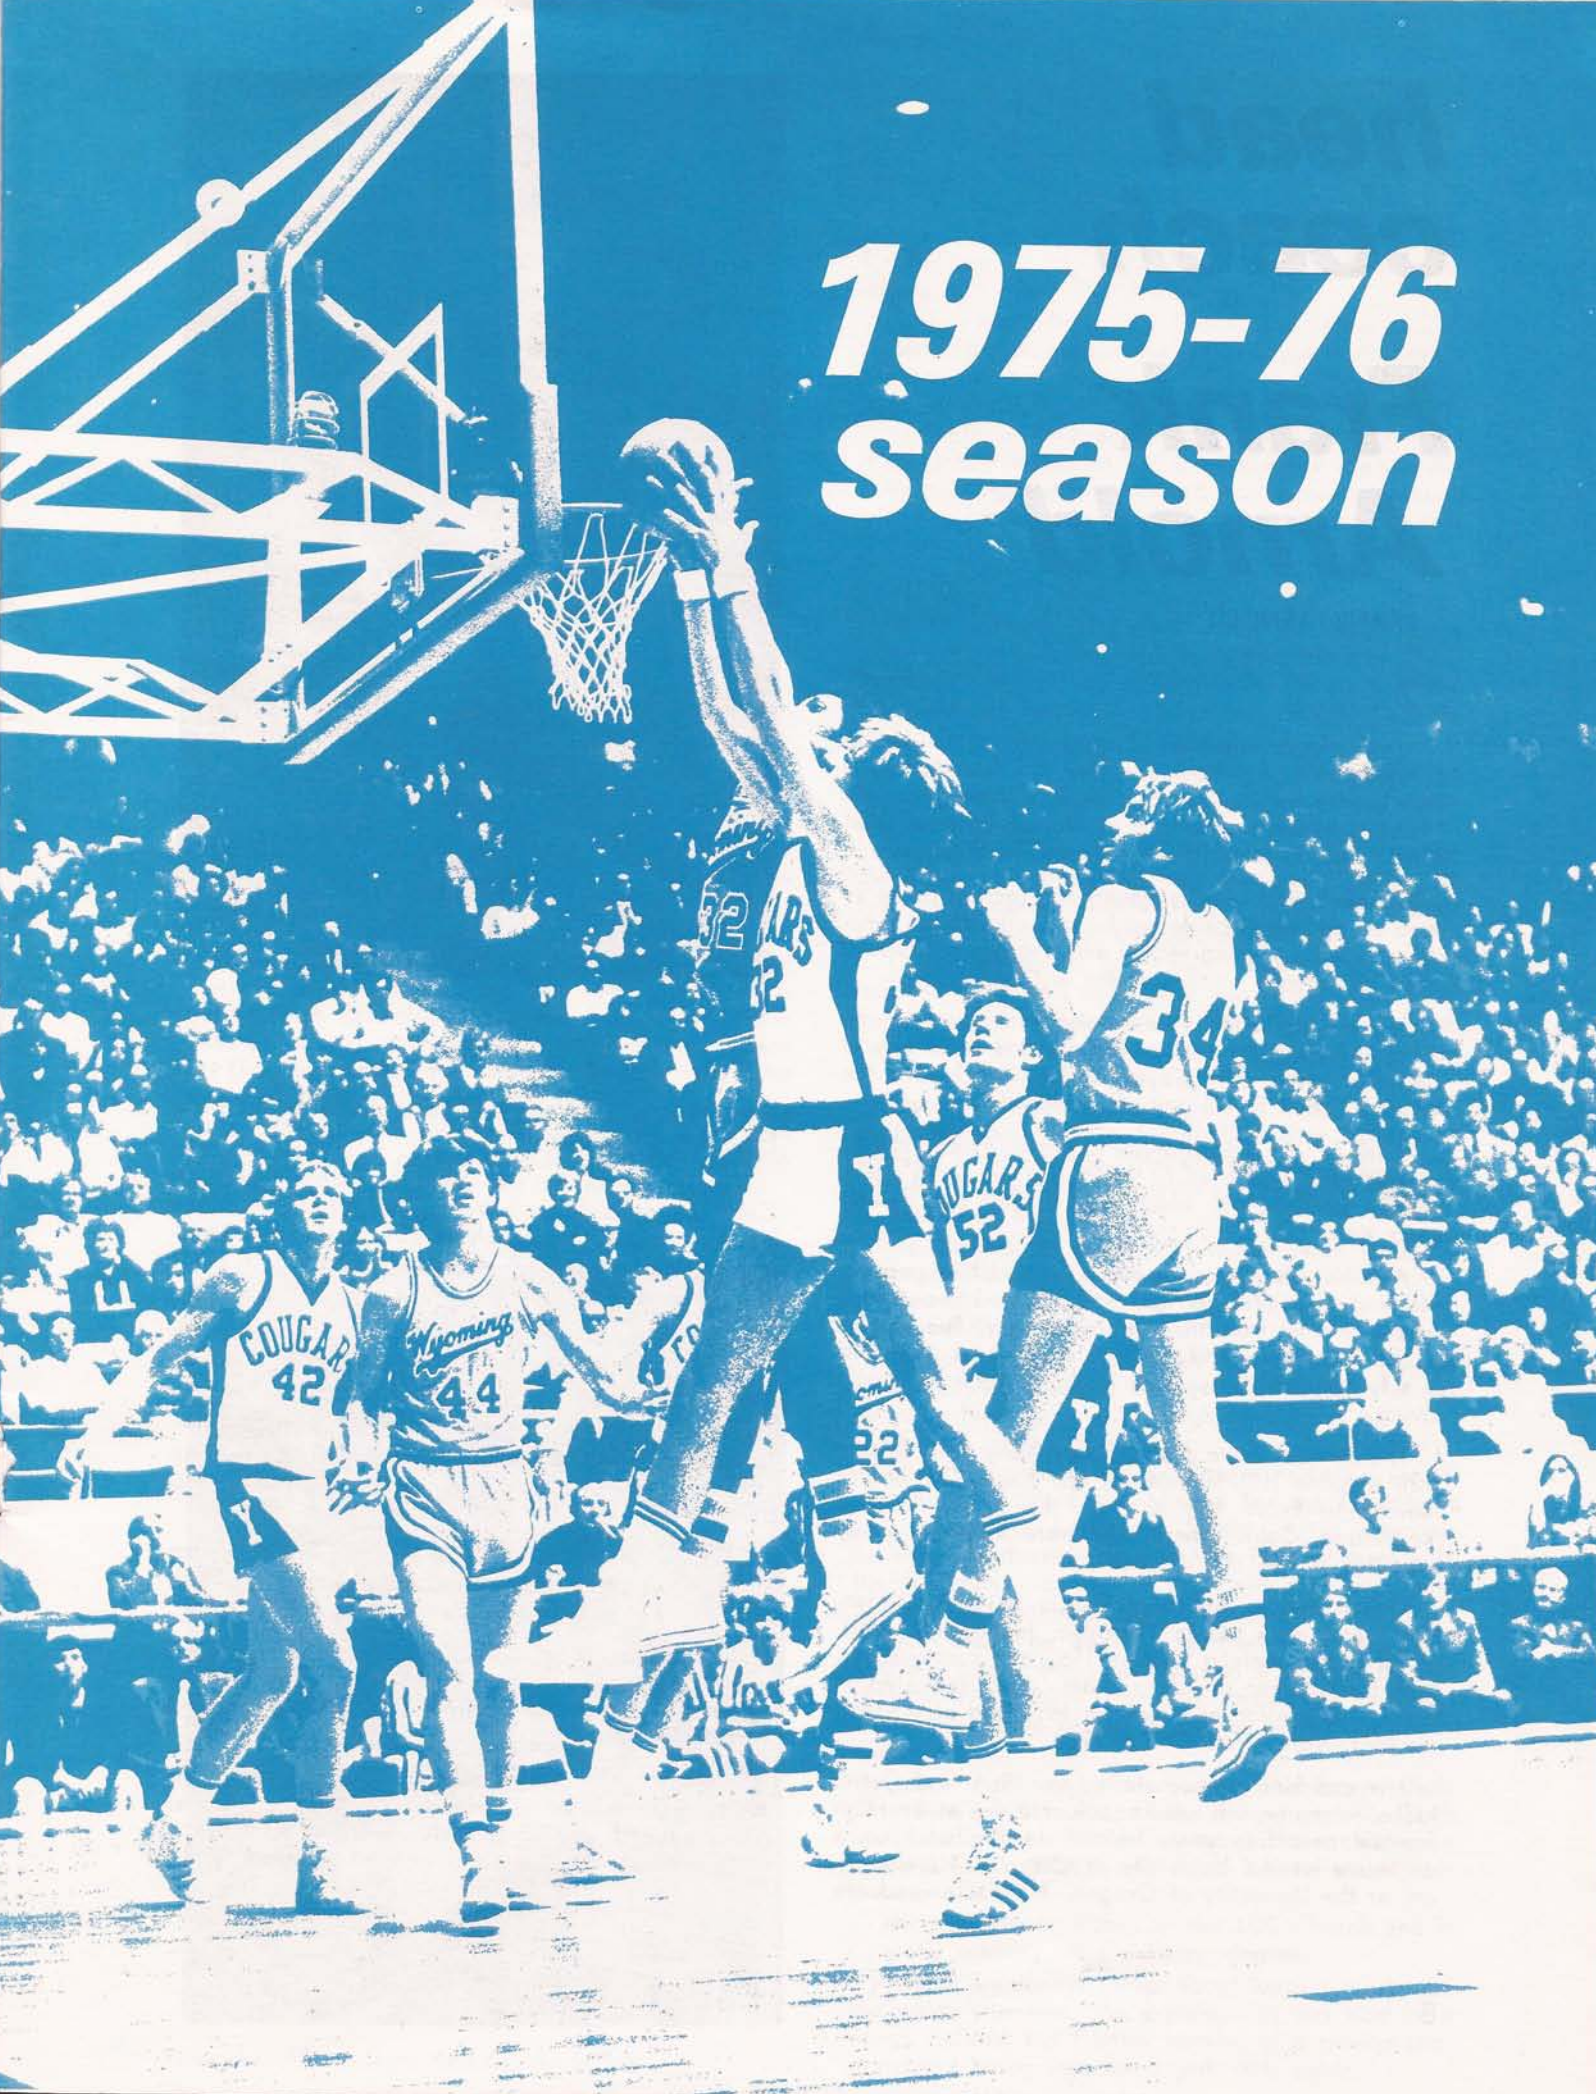

Serving as commissioner of the WAC is Stan Bates who is in his fourth year in that position. Commissioner Bates is a former director of athletics at Washington State, and assumed his present post on July 1, 1971. Other WAC commissioners were Paul Brechler (1962-1968) and Wiles Hallock (1968-1971).

The Western Athletic Conference came into being on July 1, 1962. There were six charter members: Arizona, Arizona State, Brigham Young, New Mexico, Utah and Wyoming. Two members, Colorado State University and Texas-El Paso, were added to the group on July 1, 1968.

Conference headquarters are located in the Denver-Hilton, 1515 Cleveland Place (Area Code 303, 222-1743), Denver, Colo., 80202.

Director of information for the WAC is Nordy Jensen, who took over his job in July, 1972.

1975-76 season

Frank Arnold

FRANK ARNOLD takes over this season as the 11th basketball coach in BYU history and he is full of enthusiasm and determination to rebound the Cougars' hoop fortunes.

"I've always regarded Brigham Young University as an outstanding institution and I've always had a high regard for the school and its athletic program. I'm glad to become a part of it and to make what contribution I can to the school and the Church."

Coach Arnold inherits players and recruits primarily lined up before he came but he is confident the team can achieve a winning record and improve on its sixth place conference finishes of the last two years.

"There's tremendous desire and enthusiasm among our squad members and we feel that's a great way to start the season. Our players worked very hard in the fall and I think it will pay off during the season."

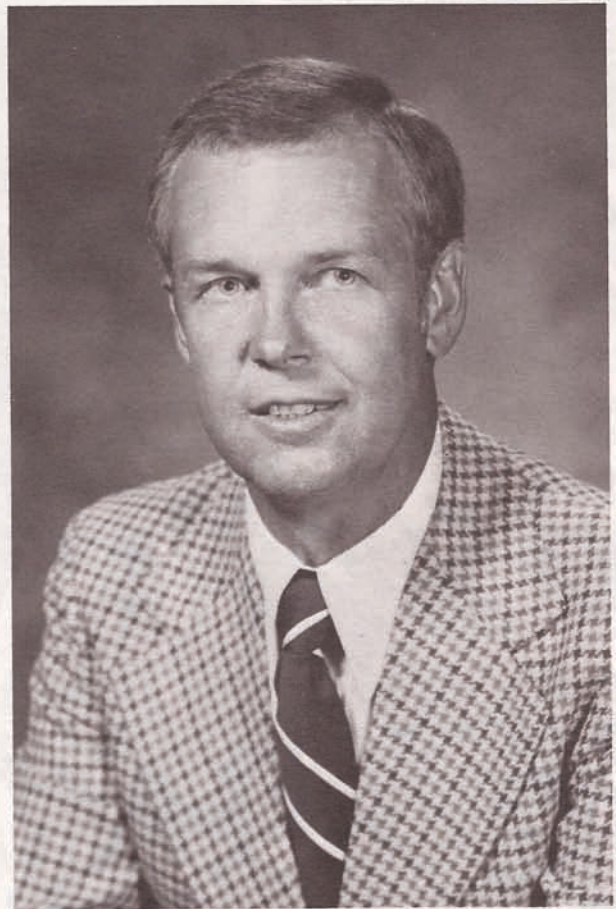

Frank Arnold is no stranger to Provo. From 1958-62 he was head coach at BY High, the university's laboratory prep school which was phased out several years ago.

And his wife, Bee, is a Provo native. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W.R. Wright, still live in Provo--only a couple of miles from the Marriott Center. Bee obtained her bachelor's and master's degrees at BYU and is a former faculty member in the College of Family Living.

The Arnolds have five children--Kelly (14), Kristyn (12), Kipline (10), Gibson (6) and Kaline (3). Before moving to Provo last summer, the family lived in Northridge, Calif., where they were active in many activities of the LDS Church.

Coach Arnold was born Oct. 1, 1934, in Ogden, Utah, and grew up in Pocatello, Idaho. He graduated from Pocatello High in 1952 and continued his basketball career at Idaho State. He graduated in physical education and math in 1956 and obtained a master's degree from BYU in 1960.

His coaching career started in 1956 in Payette, Idaho, where he was head coach. He was at BY High for the next five years before starting work on a doctorate at the University of Oregon. He doctorate at the University of Oregon. He was a graduate assistant one year and was head coach at Pocatello High for a year.

From 1964-66 he was head basketball coach at Clark Junior College in Vancouver, Wash. He then became an assistant coach at Oregon for five years before moving to UCLA in the same capacity in 1971.

Coach Arnold spent four seasons under John Wooden at UCLA and, ironically, one of his top recruits for the Bruins was seven-footer Brett Vroman, a teammate of Veryl and Vance Law at Provo High.

Now Arnold is recruiting for BYU and has promised to bring in the calibre of athlete who can keep the Cougars consistently among the nation's top 20 teams.

And he has kept very busy in recruiting efforts since taking over. The next crop of incoming freshmen should bear the fruits of his efforts.

Coach Arnold has done a good job of passing his own confidence and optimism on his players and has impressed Cougar fans with his well organized and productive practice sessions.

So while he is not likely to be involved in the NCAA championships this season like he was at UCLA, Coach Arnold is likely to have the Cougars back in contention for the conference title before too long.

John McMullen steps up to the college ranks this season after a very successful high school coaching career in southern California.

He spent the last seven years at Camarillo High School, where his teams posted a 133-52 record. In the past four years his squads won 91 and lost 21 in gaining four successive CIF playoffs, one championship and three league titles.

"I really enjoyed the high school ranks," says Coach McMullen. "But I was ready for a new challenge and I feel fortunate to have been considered by a school like BYU. Being an assistant coach is a different role than a head coach has but it offers the chance for individual teaching and recruiting which are indispensable."

Coach McMullen will have responsibility for recruiting outside the Intermountain area, especially the West Coast. He is familiar with top California athletes, having served on the executive council of the Southern California Interscholastic Basketball Coaches Association and been on the staff on summer camps sponsored by Bill Sharman of the Lakers and John Wooden of UCLA.

He was born Sept. 12, 1939 in Topeka, Kansas, but has lived in California since he was 14. He excelled in basketball at Reseda High and played at Pierce College and for Cal State University at Northridge.

After graduating in 1962 he coached and taught "just about everything" for four years at St. Genevieve High School in Panorama City, Calif. From 1966-68 he was assistant basketball and track coach at Thousand Oaks High School, the city where he made his home until moving to Provo.

In 1968 he took over a struggling hoop program and by 1972 had posted a 28-3 record and won the CIF Southern California championship. He was league Coach of the Year last season and a finalist for Ventura County Coach of the year. He also was varsity golf coach five years.

Coach McMullen's wife, Susan, is a native of California. They have been married five years and have a one-year-old son named John Andrew McMullen, who goes by Andy.

In addition to coaching and teaching responsibilities, Coach McMullen has completed six years in the California Air National Guard and is nearly through with requirements for a master's degree at California Lutheran College in Thousand Oaks.

BYU assistant coach Harry Anderson returns to the campus after a decade of highly successful coaching at nearby Orem High School, where he tutored Jay Cheesman of this year's team and coached against Veryl and Vance Law.

During his 10 years at Orem, Coach Anderson's teams were perennial contenders for league honors. In the last eight seasons his teams won 144 games and lost only 28. They were in the semifinals or finals of the state tournament his last five years. His final two teams placed second in the state, losing each time by a single point to arch-rival Provo.

Coach Anderson left Orem High on sabbatical leave in 1974 and soon after was offered the head coaching job at Utah Tech, Provo's junior college. At UTC he produced the school's first winning record in their four-year history.

Harry Anderson was born July 18, 1935 in Murray, Utah, but grew up in Grantsville, Utah, where he lettered in four sports. He was offered football and basketball grants-in-aid to BYU and chose to compete in basketball and track.

He started his junior and senior years (1955-57) and the final team he played on won the Skyline Conference championship under Stan Watts, now the Director of Athletics at BYU.

Coach Anderson averaged 12 points in college basketball and lettered four years in track. He was timed in the 100 in 9.7 in high school and recorded a 9.5 in a Skyline meet.

After his college career Coach Anderson served two years in the British Mission for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. After returning he was a graduate assistant under Pete Witbeck with the freshman team for a year and then was head coach in St. Anthony, Idaho, for a year.

From there he went to Hillcrest High School in Midvale, Utah, where he coached a year under Art Hughes, a legend in Utah prep circles. His next stop was Orem, where he also served as head track coach four years.

Coach Anderson is married to the former Judy Rasmussen of Bountiful, Utah. They met while both were students at BYU. They have three children—Tamara 12, Mathew 9 and Ryan 3—and make their home in Orem.

He is a former Bishop in the LDS Church and is currently working on a masters' degree.

"There are always things about leaving a job you like which you miss," he explains. "It was kind of a tough decision but I enjoy working in a college program and being associated with BYU again."

Coaches McMullen, Arnold, Anderson

the outlook:

feeling for success

Are you satisfied with your recruiting this first year?

Although it is rather difficult to recruit quality basketball players in such a short period of time we feel very satisfied with what we were able to do. A good portion of the success should be credited to the former staff, because they laid the ground work on two outstanding basketball players—Verne Thompson and Steve Craig. We were very fortunate to recruit a fine prospect in Terry Gugat, a junior college All-American from Mesa College in Colorado, as well as two other fine freshmen in Craig Christensen from Highland High School, whom we felt was the best guard in the state of Utah last year—and Misho Ostarcevic, who comes to us from Yugoslavia.

Do you plan any sweeping changes in the program, and if so, what will they be?

I am quite certain that the Cougar fans will see an entirely different system of play this year. We are making every effort to implement a fast-tempo style of game, which will include fast break and full-court pressure basketball. It is very unlikely that you will see the new team play any half-court zone defense. We will concentrate rather on a very aggressive, intense man-to-man defense.

Are you tailoring the system to fit the personnel, or will the two fit together pretty well?

We are definitely custom-making the offense to fit the personnel, as we will attempt to do each year.

On this year's squad, it appears as though we have several players at 6'4" to 6'9"—which will make it necessary for us to play with a one-guard front and four bigger fellows in the lineup. At the present time, we plan to begin the season with a deep double post, with one of the two flashing to the high post to put us, in effect, in a 1-3-1 offensive alignment.

Some observers feel the guard line will be the critical position this season. Do you see it that way?

I do not share the feeling that some of our pessimistic critics feel regarding our guard line. On the contrary, I feel that the guard position will be in good hands. We have some very fine players at that position who will be more than adequate to handle our needs. Outlook (cont'd) . . .

Of the lettermen and squad members returning, do you plan to switch any players to different positions?

It will be reasonable to expect Mark Handy to play more inside this year than last. He will, however, have some experience at the high post as well as the low post. We feel that his shooting is coming along quite well, and if we keep him within his range, he will do an outstanding job for us. Jay Cheesman on the other hand, will be playing more at the high post than at the low—although he has exceptional ability at the low post, and we do not want to take those opportunities away from him entirely. Troy Jones will see considerable action this year. His improvement has been significant, and we feel he has the potential to be an outstanding basketball player for us.

With some preseason practice behind you, what, generally, do you regard as the team's strengths and weaknesses?

After approximately three weeks of practices, I feel that one of the strengths of this basketball team will be shooting. It appears as though we have some very fine shooters on our squad. I wouldn't call this particularly a weakness, but it would be nice if we were to have a 6'11" - 7'1" post man. In today's major college basketball circles, it is very difficult to be a national power unless you have that dominant big man. We are blessed in having three outstanding 6'9" players, but none at the 7' level—which we could always use.

Looking at the schedule, what do you regard as the toughest challenge?

As I look at the schedule, one of the most difficult things that we have to contend with is the fact that we play four games in a six-day period of time during the exam week. That certainly is not conducive to outstanding basketball play. We feel very strongly that these young men are on this campus for an education first and that they must take time to prepare themselves adequately for their examinations. Therefore, that will mean our practices will not be fully attended, and briefer than normal. However, I would gladly trade this year's schedule for next—when we play eight games on the road in December and only three at home. We must, however, keep the preseason play in proper perspective. The most important thing to our basketball team is the conference play, and we will consider the preseason as simply a dress rehearsal in our preparation for the major performance—again being conference play.

How would you evaluate basketball played in the Western Athletic Conference?

Basketball played in the Western Athletic Conference is of exceptional caliber. There is no doubt that year-in and year-out the teams from top to bottom in the WAC perform at the highest level and will compete favorably with teams of any other conference in America. Unfortunately, we are not located in a major metropolitan area where we would receive a greater exposure and publicity. That in itself tends to make teams higher ranked than those of us located in the Rocky Mountain communities.

Which teams in the WAC would you rank as contenders and why?

I am not really that familiar with the teams in the WAC Conference, but from the research that I have done and the personnel that I am personally familiar with, I would have to say that the four southern schools would all have a chance to win the championship. Arizona, perhaps, must be considered the most logical choice for a first place—simply because they have all five starters returning from a team that had the best win-loss record in the past many years at the University of Arizona. Texas-El Paso, on the other hand, took second place in our conference last year, and they have three starters and their first substitute, who played significantly, coming back. That will give them an outstanding nucleus. The University of New Mexico hired a basketball coach from Compton College, one of the strongest junior colleges in America last year—and he just happened to bring with him two 6'8" All-American basketball players. In addition, they were fortunate to recruit another 6'5" junior college All-American from the East Coast. That, then, gives them overnight an outstanding nucleus with which to build a power. Arizona State, on the other hand, lost a lot of their basketball players—but the average fan is not familiar with the outstanding substitutes and red shirts they had who will make up their ball club this year. They, too, will have outstanding talent. For any of the four northern schools to replace the four southern schools will be a difficult task, but one that is not out of reach.

What will it take for the Cougars to have a successful season?

I guess that depends on one's definition of success. To put it as briefly as I can, I feel strongly that success is very simply doing the very best you can with what you have. There is no question in my mind, on that basis, that our BYU basketball team this year will be successful. We have outstanding young men who have their fair share of basketball ability. I feel that, to date, our practices have been exceptional—that these young men are willing and eager to learn, and are working with a great deal of dedication and intensity in their approach to the season. I feel that we will certainly be competitive and entertaining, and that anybody that we play this year will know that they have been in a contest. I am not in a position to predict our win-loss record, simply because I do not have a comparison of our opponents to go on. I feel I can say, however, with all sincerity, that we will have a winning basketball season.

player personnel

20 Craig Christensen

Guard, 6-4, 170, Freshman
Salt Lake City, Utah

If ever a player was destined to wear a Cougar uniform, it's Craig Christensen.

The slender guard from Highland High in Salt Lake City is the son of Harold Christensen, who played on the 1951 NIT championship team for BYU. From the time the elder Christensen started kindergarten until he graduated from college his education was guided by BYU.

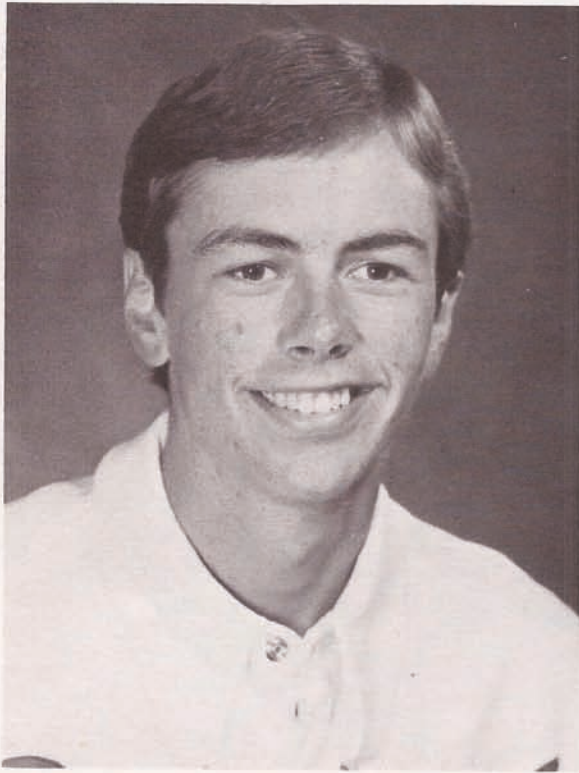

At that time the school operated both a secondary and elementary school, which Harold attended. Craig's grandmother still lives only a few blocks from the campus, and his late grandfather, Dr. P. A. Christensen, was a professor of English and long-time member of the Athletic Council at BYU.

After college Harold served in the Air Force and was stationed near Merced, Calif., when Craig was born 3/19/57. He is the oldest boy in a family of four children. His mother, Joanne, met and married Craig's father after meeting him in college at BYU.

Craig, nicknamed "Chris" to distinguish him from the other varsity freshman Steve Craig, played for three years at Highland. For the last two years he was an all-region selection. Last season he gained all-state status and was the leading scorer in Salt Lake City.

Highland was eighth in the state when he was a sophomore and placed third the past two seasons. His biggest thrill was knocking two-time defending champion out of contention in the quarterfinals.

Craig enjoys music and plays the guitar a little. And he has spent a lot of time following BYU sports through his father, now a constructional engineer.

21 Vance Law

Guard, 6-1, 175, Sophomore
Provo, Utah

Vance Law started out in the BYU athletic program as a ninth grader when he served as a bat boy for the Cougar baseball team. He then became a top player himself in baseball and basketball, following in the footsteps of his father, Vernon, a pitcher with the Pirates, and his brother, Veryl, a junior guard on this year's hoop team.

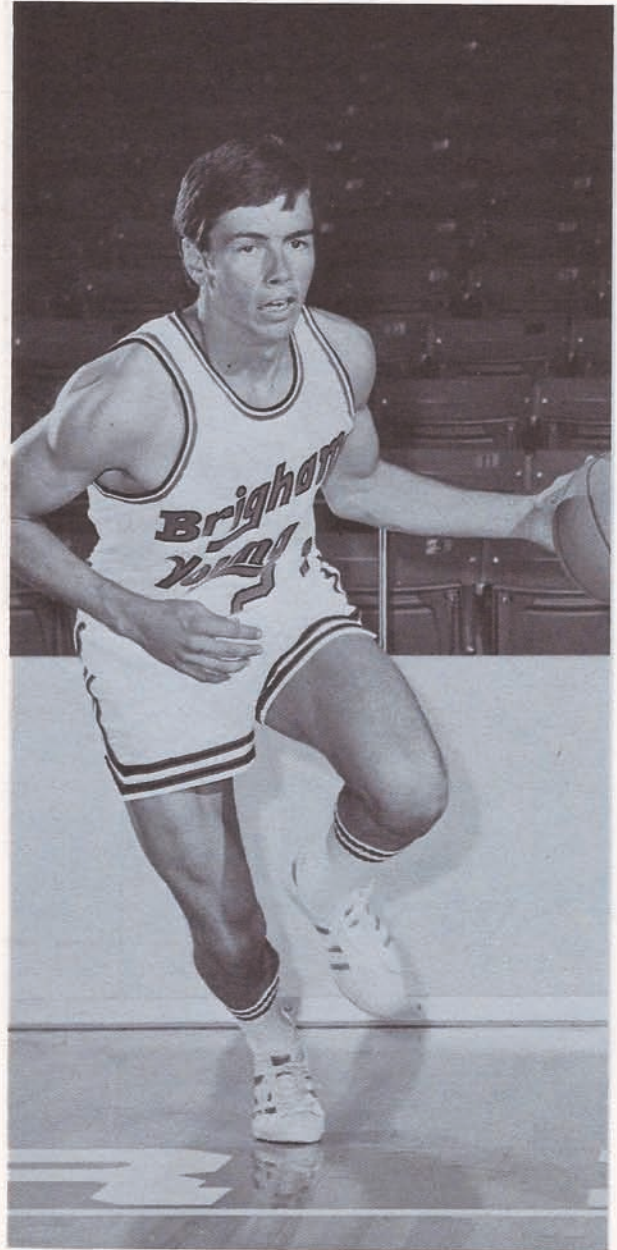

Both his junior and senior years at Provo High School, the squad was unbeaten in basketball in winning two straight state championships. He also was a shortstop and pitcher for two years in baseball and played American Legion ball for two years.

Last year as a freshman "Vinny" was the Cougars' starting shortstop and hit .308 to earn All-Northern Division honors in the WAC. He was on the third team All-Southwest squad in baseball and is eyeing a pro career.

In the meantime, he enjoys basketball very much and played in 21 games as a freshman. He had a high of 10 points against Arizona State and provided 14 assists.

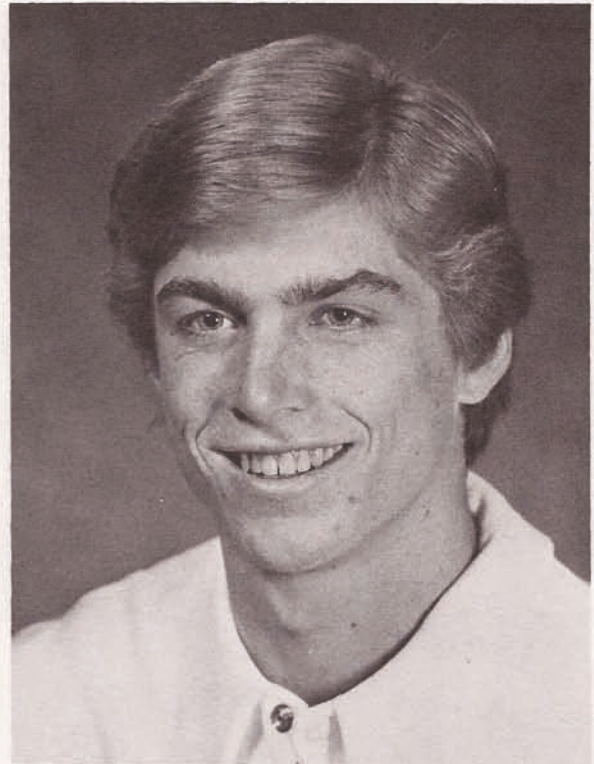

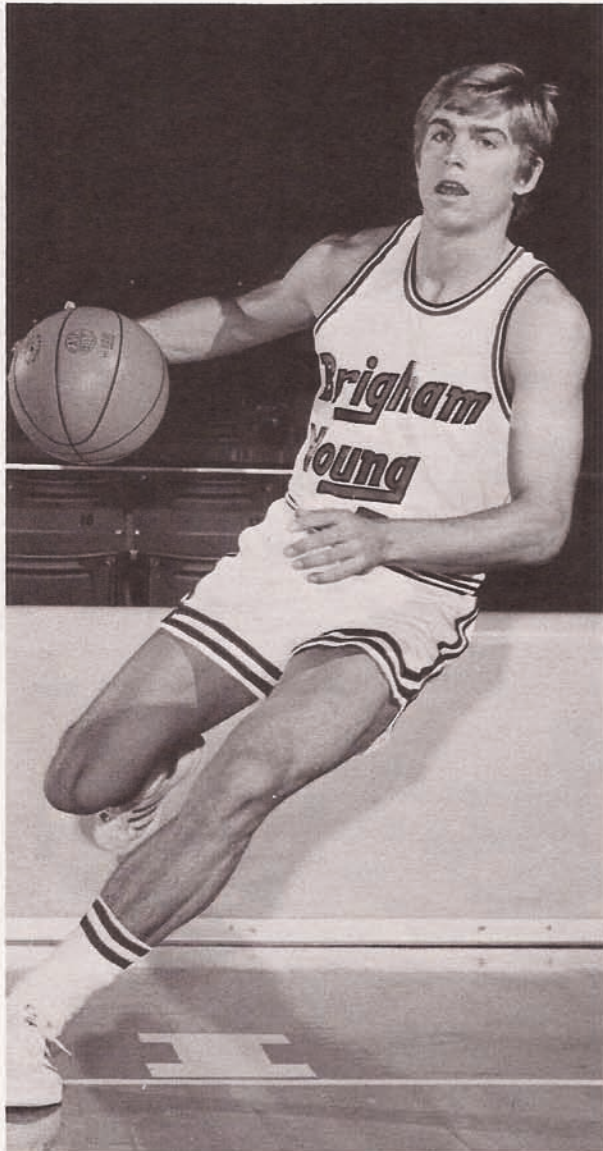

This season Vance could push hard for a starting berth since he is one of the team's most improved players. He has shown good leadership and playmaking ability as well as a sharp outside shooting eye.

Vance is a health major with interests in teaching and coaching. He was born 10/1/56 in Boise, Idaho, where his family resided until he was 13. They moved to Provo when Vern joined the BYU athletic staff.

23 Steve Craig

Guard, 6-2, 175, Freshman
Beverly Hills, California

The Southern California CIF Athlete of the Year in 1974-75, Steve Craig is pushing hard for a varsity berth this season although only a freshman. He is a strong jumper and, despite the offensive prowess he shows in practice sessions, lists ball handling and defense as his main assets on the court.

Craig was heavily recruited out of high school as a wide receiver in football but decided on sticking with basketball. His grid team won the league championship and the basketball squad went to the CIF semifinals in Southern California. He also pitched for the baseball team before being sidelined with a broken ankle.

Steve was born 8/26/56 at the UCLA Hospital. He is the son of Robert and Charlene Craig of Beverly Hills. Bob, now the high school volleyball coach, played on the 1951 NIT championship team for BYU.

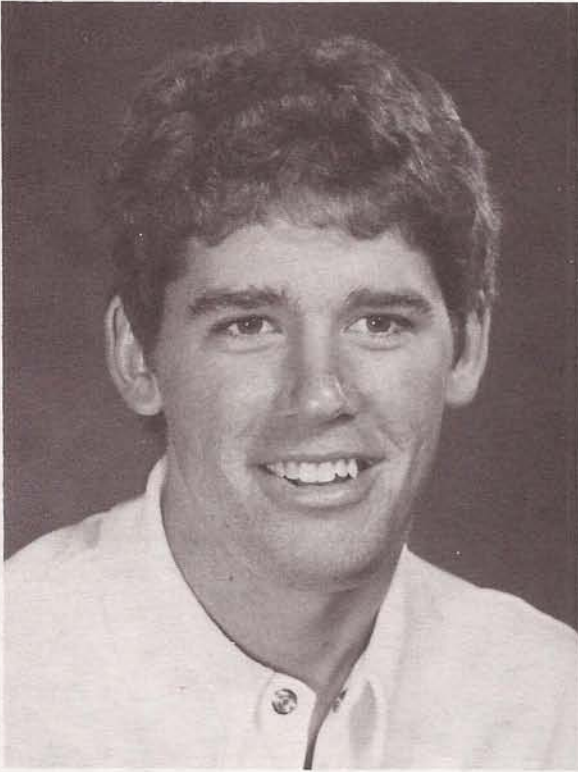

"They left the decision on college up to me but later told me they were very happy with my choice," says Steve, who was also actively recruited by one of BYU's chief rivals, Utah State.

Steve had a brother and sister who graduated from BYU last year and an uncle, Wesley, is a professor in the Sociology Department at BYU. Steve's cousin, Carol, is the 1975 Miss Provo.

Craig enjoys water skiing and divides his summer time between playing ball in Los Angeles and working on the family's ranch near Richfield, Utah.

Steve is not bothered at all by being with the varsity players as a freshman, stating, "Playing with better guys is the only way to improve."

From the talent he displayed in pre-season workouts, Cougar fans will be seeing a lot of Steve Craig in the next four years.

25 Tim Mould

Guard, 6-4, 205, Sophomore
Whittier, California

Tim Mould is back in action after sitting out a year and he could make a big contribution to the BYU guard line this season. His 6-4 frame will come in handy especially if 6-5 Gifford Nielsen decides to give up basketball in favor of football.

Mould was the starting center for three years at California High School in Whittier, Calif. He was an all-league selection for three years and all-CIF his final two years.

Tim scored 15 points a game two years ago in making the transition from center to guard for the BYU junior varsity. He responded well with some sharp outside shooting.

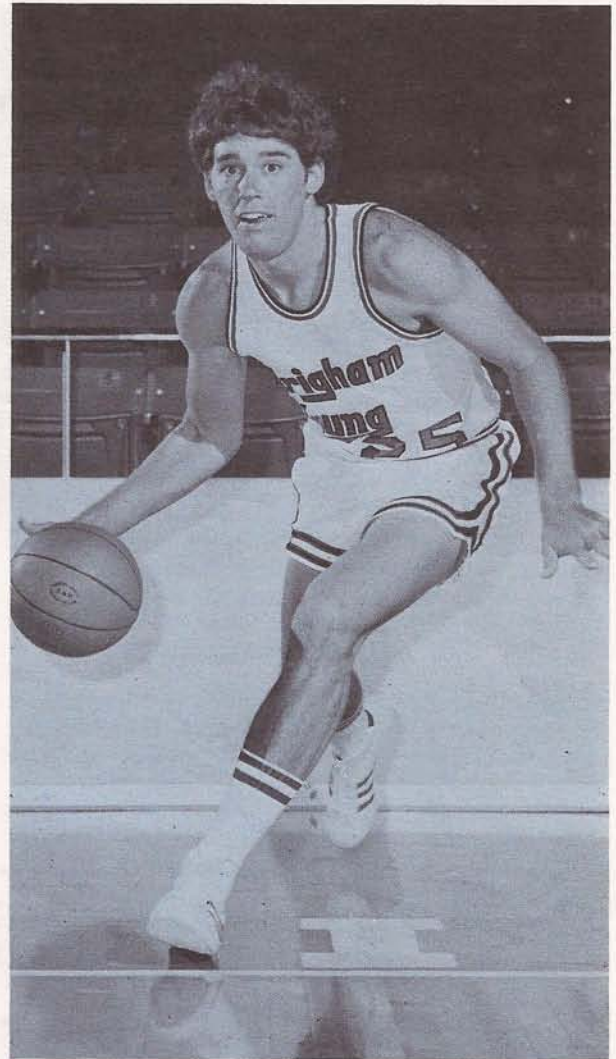

"Offensively the switch wasn't too hard, but it took a real strong effort on defense because I wasn't used to having everyone behind me," he explains.

Tim was born to Lois and Donald Mould on 3/18/55 in Whittier. In the beach atmosphere of Southern California, he grew up playing volleyball. That's how he keeps in shape during the summers.

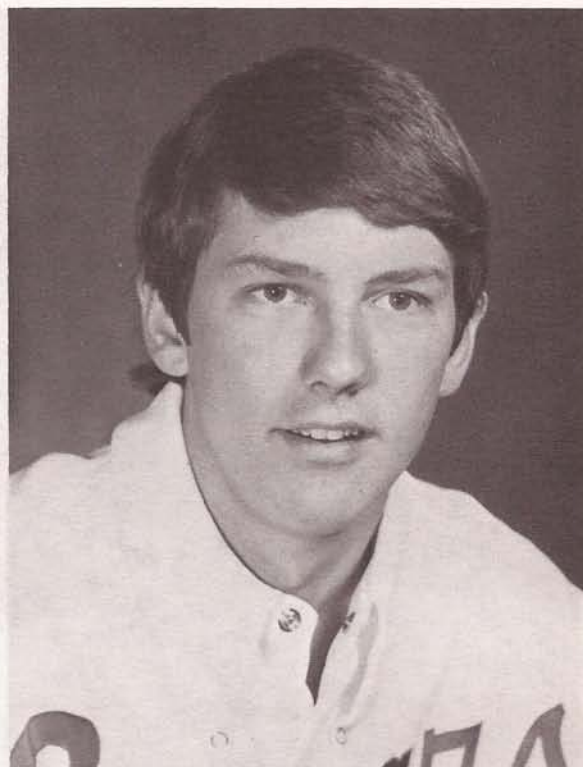

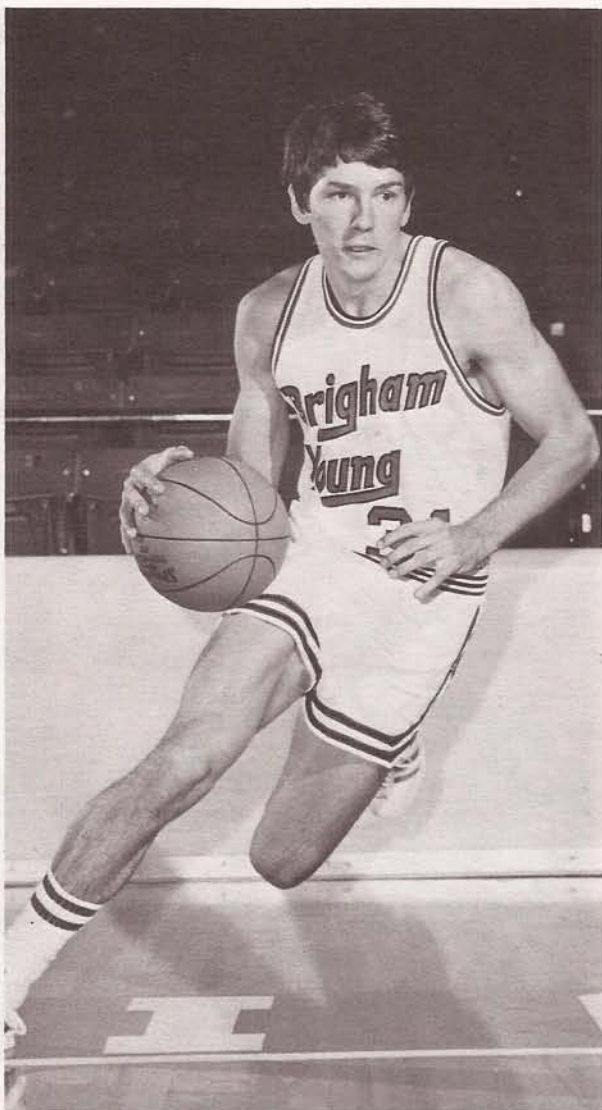

His father was on the track team at San Diego State, and a brother, Gary, played in the St. Louis Cardinals farm system for two years. Another brother, Dennis, was a four-year letterman in football at Pomona College.

Tim is a physical education major with a minor in business. He likes music and owns an Irish setter with 17 champions in his blood line.

"It's good to be back in school and on the team," Mould says. "But I know I have a lot to do to get in shape and prove to the new coaches what I can do."

31 Veryl Law

Guard, 6-2, 180, Junior
Provo, Utah

After two seasons of varsity experience, Veryl Law seems ready to assume a leading role in BYU's basketball fortunes this season. He saw a lot of playing time last season and has worked hard during the summer.

The second in a line of talented brothers, Veryl is the son of Vernon and VaNita Law of Provo. Vern was the Cy Young Award winner for the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1960 and is now a staff member and assistant baseball coach at BYU.

An older brother, Veldon, plays on the BYU baseball team and Vance, a year younger than Veryl, is a guard on BYU's basketball team and the starting shortstop on the Cougar baseball squad.

Veryl was born 4/18/55 in Boise, Idaho, where the family made its home during the school year. After their move to Provo the Laws made big contributions to the local sports scene. Veryl, for example, was all-state in both basketball and football.

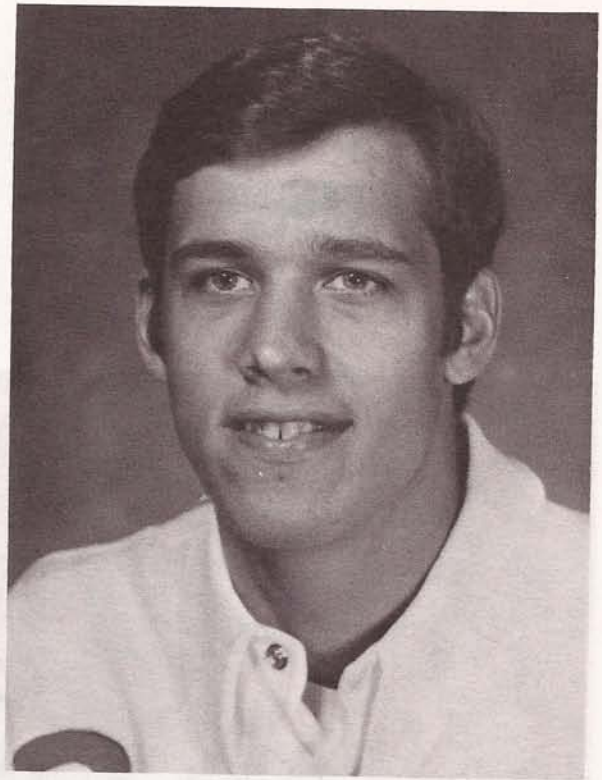

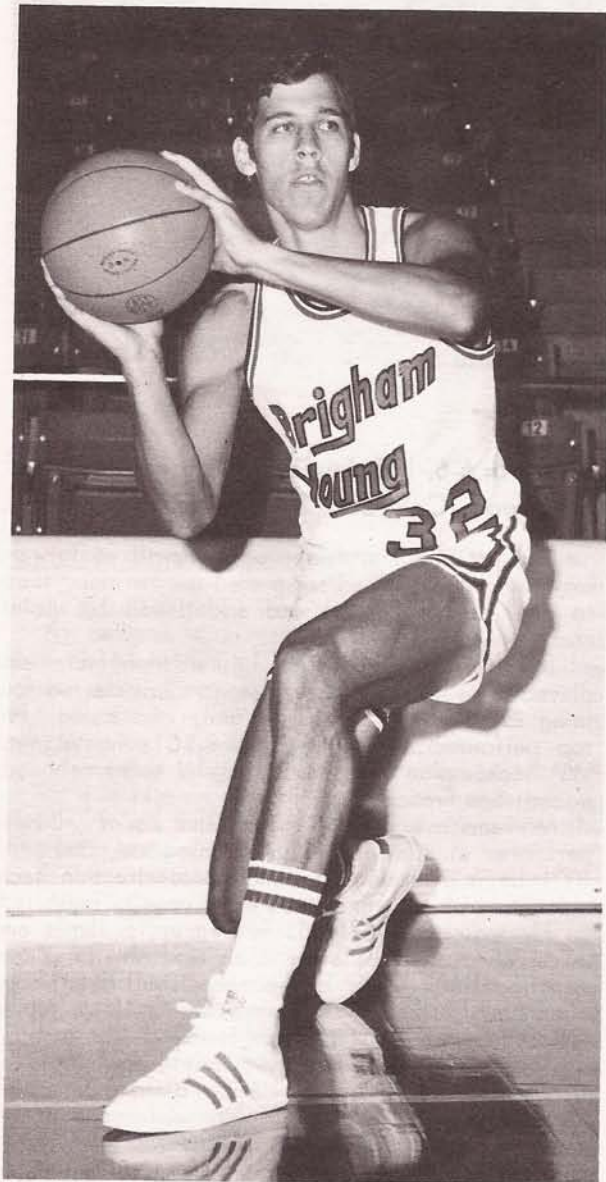

He was sixth man as a junior on a hoop team which placed fourth in the state and started on an unbeaten team his senior year until breaking his collarbone in the state tournament.

Veryl split time between the varsity and junior varsity as a freshman at BYU. He was a part-time starter last season, finishing sixth in the WAC in free throw shooting.

Veryl is an avid hunter and fisherman and makes furniture as a hobby. On Aug. 22 he married Anne Whitaker, whose father operates the motion picture studio at BYU.

32 Reed Noble

Forward, 6-6, 200, Senior
Glendale, California

If a vote were taken for the most popular Cougar among the players themselves, the winner would likely be Reed Noble. A master at imitations and strange sounds, Noble is the kind of guy who makes it hard for his teammates to stay uptight about anything too long.

Noble should also help BYU on the basketball court after seeing very limited action last season. He was a walk-on as a junior varsity player two years ago.

He averaged 19 points in gaining all-league honors at Glendale's Hoover High School. He also high jumped 6-5 and set a school record in the hurdles.

After a year at Glendale Community College, Reed transferred to BYU but lost some credits in the process and had to sit out a year. He spent the 1972-73 season playing in the Central Utah League with a number of former college standouts.

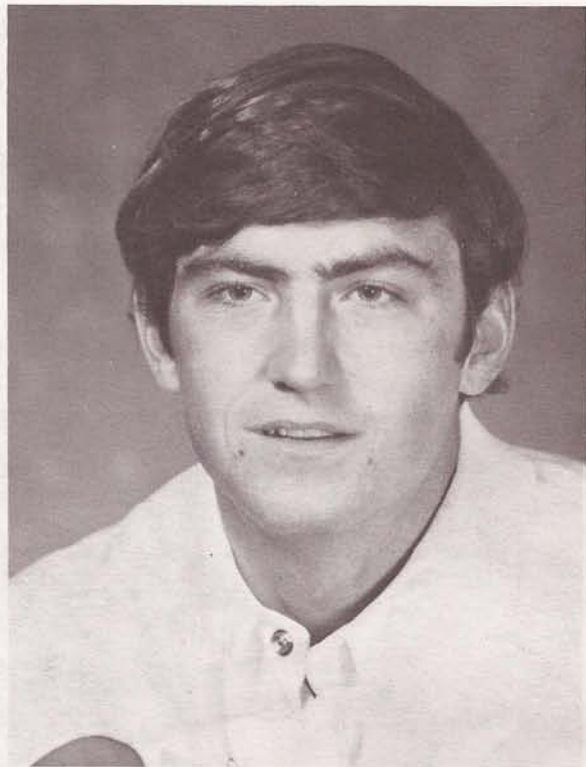

Noble broke into the entertainment business early, taking after his father, Wendell, who teamed with Steve Allen for more than 15 years on radio and television.

Reed did some commercials on radio as a child and participated in talent shows in high school. He has received lots of encouragement to put together an entertainment act based on his imitation of wars, birds and just about anyone from his teammates to prominent politicians and actors.

Noble and his wife, Karen, were married May 9. She is a former cheerleader at Hoover High.

34 Chris Williams

Forward, 6-6, 195, Senior
Lakewood, Colorado

Chris Williams provides some depth at forward for the Cougars. He has entered games many times to give regulars a rest and added valuable points and rebounds.

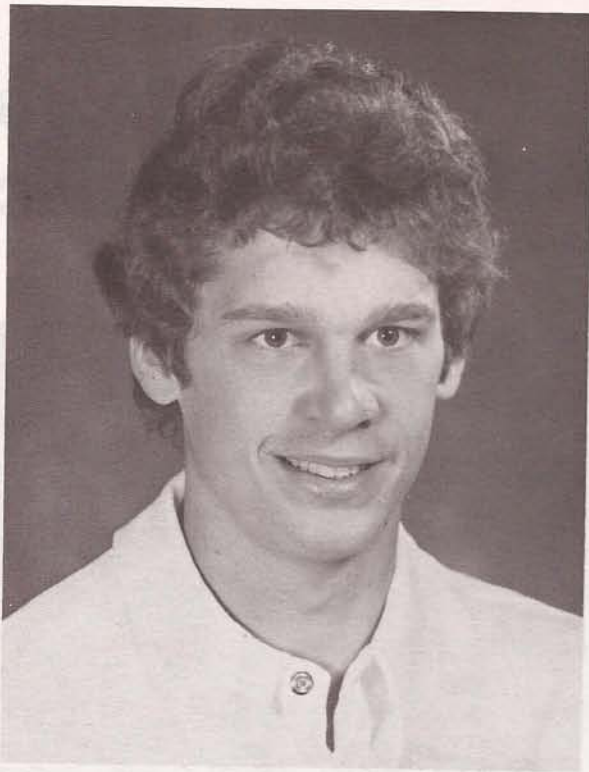

He started eight games as a sophomore and played in every game that season. Chris started four times last season and missed only one game. His top performances last year were 10 points against WAC champion Arizona State and eight rebounds against San Francisco.

Williams averaged 21 points and was an all-state performer at Alameda High in Lakewood, Colo. At BYU he is majoring in building construction technology, which will require an extra year to finish.

He was born 12/14/53 in Denver to James and Alice Williams. His father is an executive in a construction firm. Chris is the second of three boys. The older brother, Marty, went to the University of Colorado on a basketball scholarship.

Despite his reserve status Chris scored in 17 of the team's last 18 games. He is a good shooter and his experience in rebounding and defense over the past two years is certain to be an asset to the Cougars.

40 Verne Thompson

Forward, 6-6, 195, Junior
Renton, Washington

Verne Thompson, who high jumped 6-10 in junior college, is expected to give the Cougars some punch on the front line this season.

At Bellevue Community College, only 15 miles from his hometown of Renton, Thompson broke the school rebounding record and was second on the all-time career scoring list. He averaged 20.5 points per game and 12.8 rebounds his final year.

At Renton High School, Verne averaged 11.5 points and 11.6 rebounds in gaining all-league honors. He also found time to high jump and compete in the long jump and pole vault.

He was all-league two years as a junior college basketball player and showed his jumping ability with a state high jump record for the JC level.

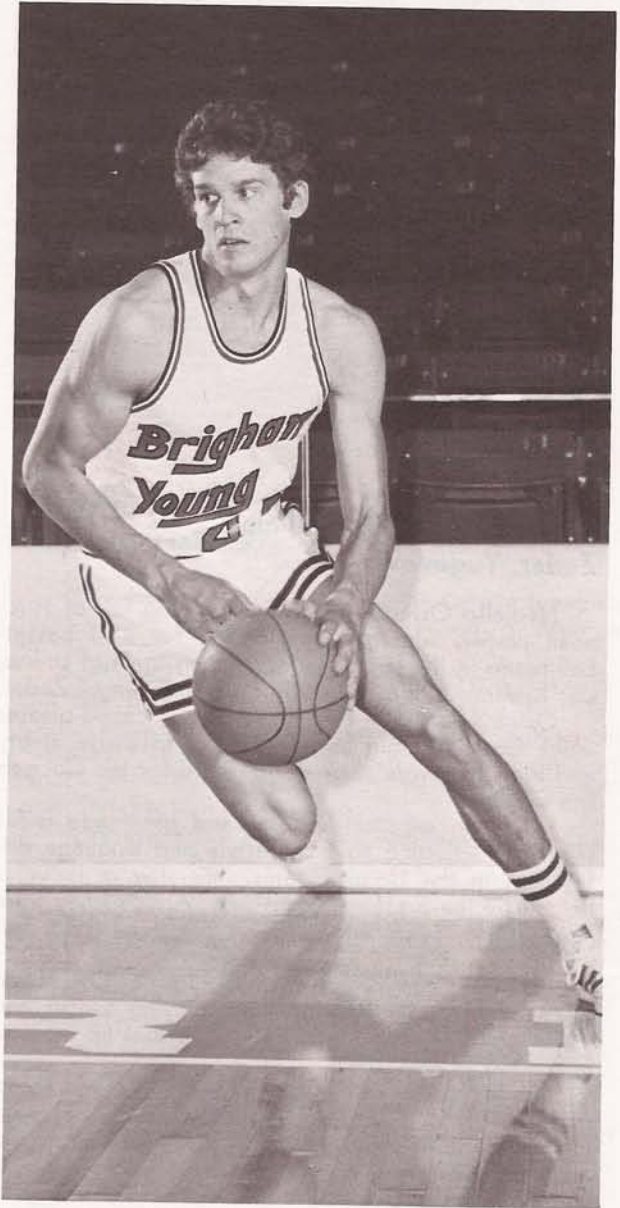

Verne was born 4/30/55 in Renton. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Verne Thompson. He is currently majoring in law enforcement and is considering future work as a probation officer.

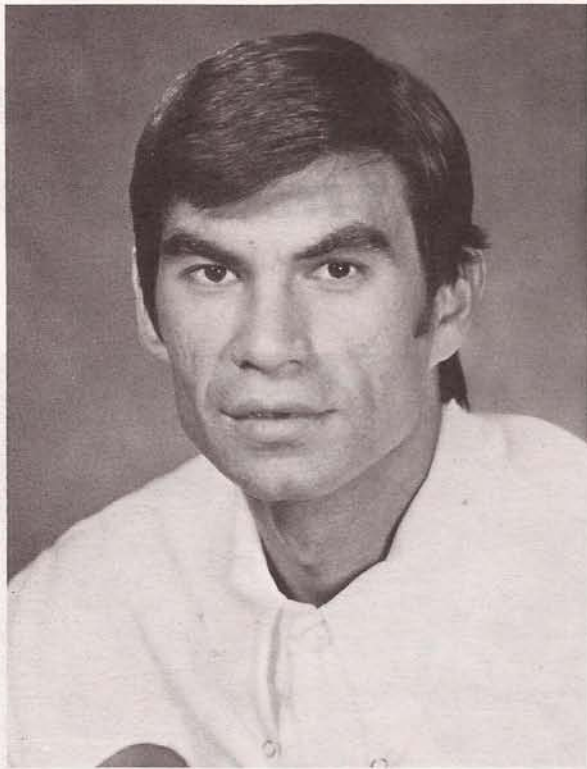

Thompson prefers the forward position but is mobile enough to hold down a guard spot should the Cougars ever utilize a one-guard offense.

His scoring and rebounding is expected to help fill the void created when leading scorer Brian Frishman decided to pass up his senior year of eligibility at BYU.

In his few spare minutes away from basketball and the classroom Thompson enjoys fishing as a hobby and relaxation.

Verne and the Cougar's other junior college transfer, Terry Cugat, should both see lots of playing time this winter.

42 Misho Ostarcevic

Forward, 6-7, 200, Freshman
Zadar, Yugoslavia

Nedjelko Ostarcevic continues a long line of European players who have performed for BYU basketball teams in the last decade. Among them of course, was Kresimir Cosic from Misho's hometown of Zadar.

Ostarcevic isn't the razzle-dazzle crowd-pleaser which Cosic was but he has a lot of offensive ability and should provide some good depth for the Cougars this season.

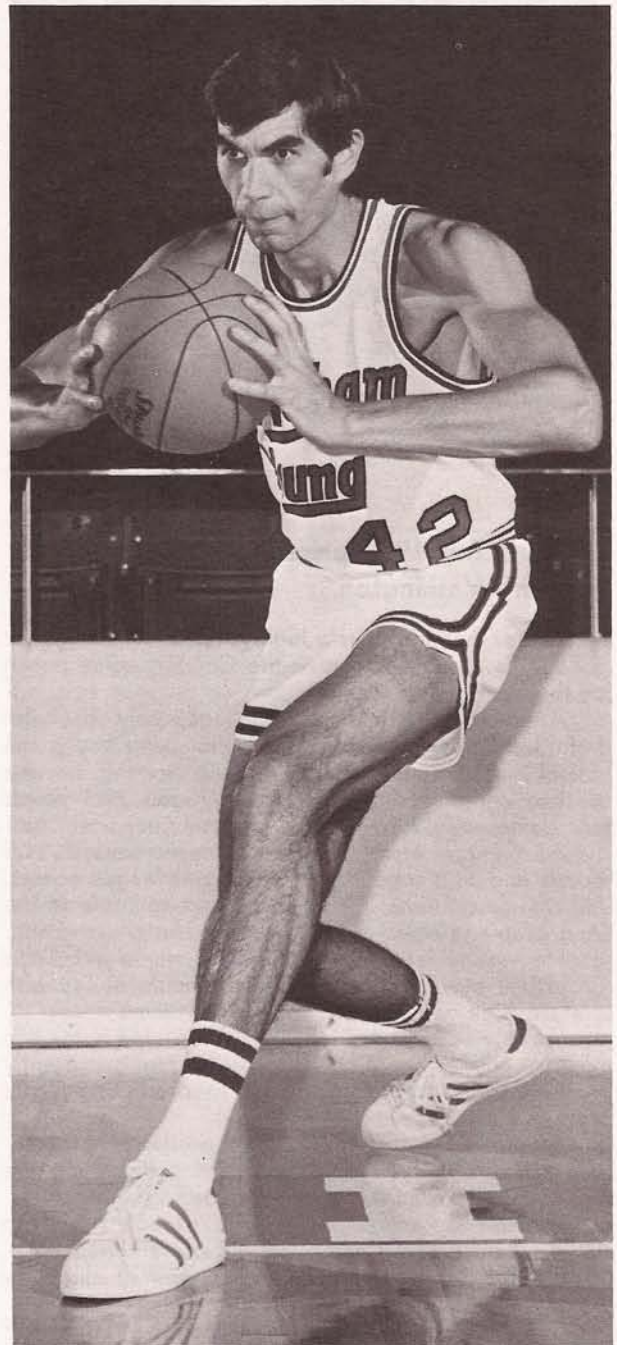

He is an excellent shooter and has made great strides in adjusting to the lifestyle and language differences in the United States. His stay in Provo is helped by the presence of his wife, Ankica (they were married two years ago) and his son, Ivan (born last year).

He was born to Ivan and Josipa Ostarcevic 7/29/52 in Zadar and grew up playing soccer and water polo. It wasn't until he was 16 that he became interested in basketball.

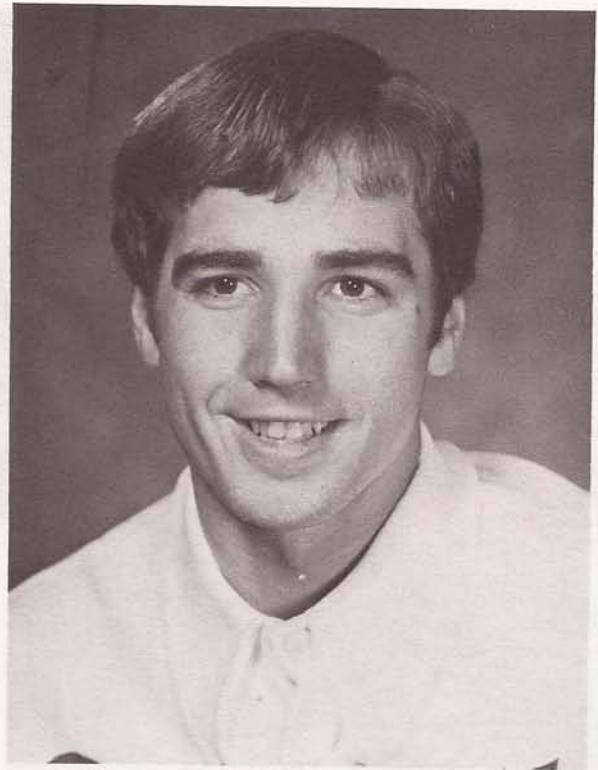

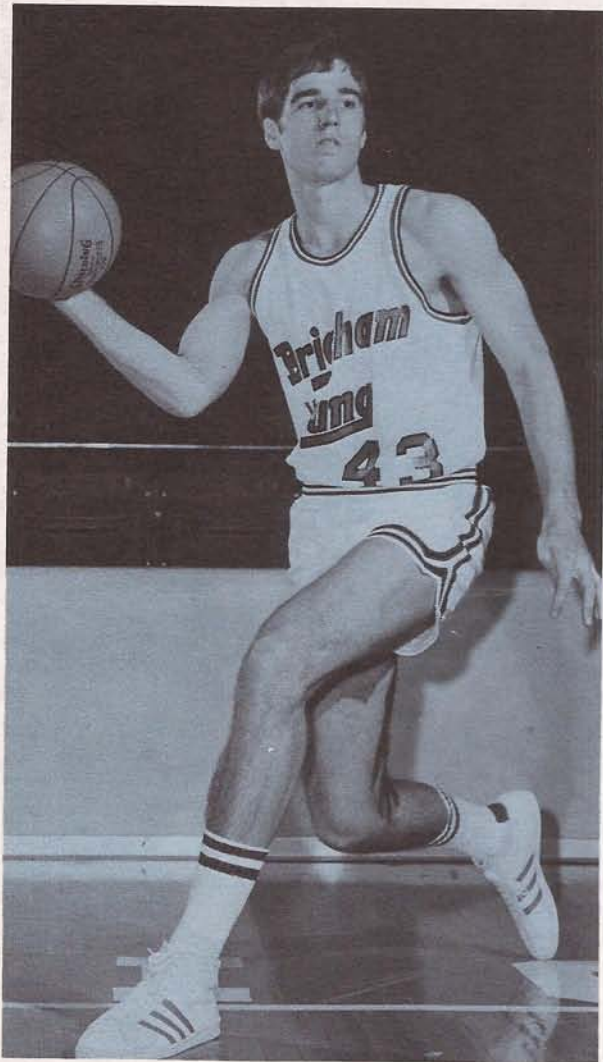

But he made vast improvement in six years and played on the Yugoslavian National team last summer. He also attended technical school to study radio and television repair. He is currently majoring in electronics at BYU.

Although Misho knew about BYU from Cosic it was a Utah native, Doug Richards, who recruited him. Richards, a three-year starter and co-captain two years ago, played in Yugoslavia last year and after brief stints with several U.S. professional teams.

Richards is currently a graduate assistant who will be handling the junior varsity team this year. But Misho probably won't be there—he seems like a good bet to be with the varsity squad.

43 Terry Gugat

Forward, 6-6, 207, Junior
San Jose, California

Terry Cugat is one of two junior college forwards expected to add scoring and rebounding strength on the front line this season.

For Cugat the decision to attend BYU was a difficult one because Mesa College in Grand Junction, Colo., moves from a two-year to a four-year school this season. But he chose to leave his teammates and Coach Bruce Haroldson (formerly an assistant at Arizona State) to join the Cougars.

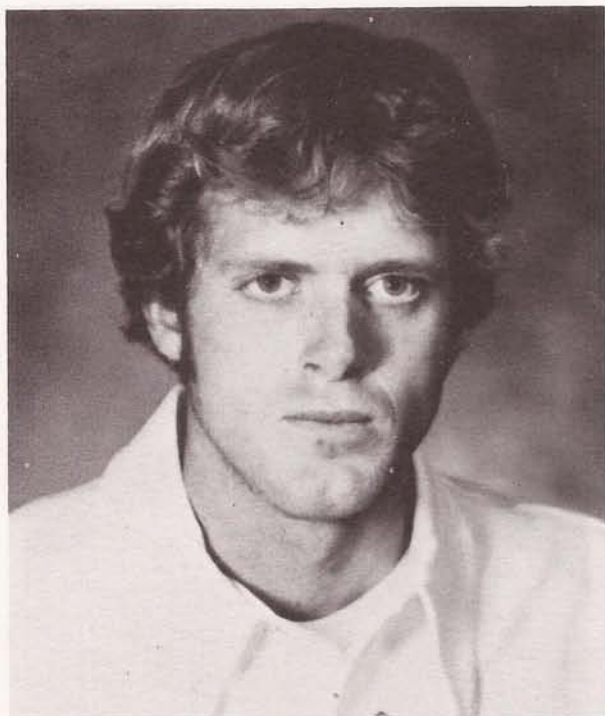

Terry averaged 24.2 points last season in gaining junior college All-American recognition last season. He won all-state honors at Cheyenne Mountain High School in Colorado Springs before attending Mesa.

Cugat calls California home. He was born 5/10/55 in San Jose to Frederick and Louise Cugat. His family moved a number of times and his father, a retired teacher, now lives in Capitola (near Santa Cruz).

Terry also is a tennis enthusiast. He competed for Mesa's team and plans to stick with tennis as a recreation after he finishes his basketball eligibility.

His brother, Rich, played basketball at UCLA and San Jose State and spent a couple of years as tennis coach at the Air Force Academy. Another brother, Kevin, played varsity tennis at Chico State.

Cugat seems ready to make a big contribution to BYU hoop fortunes with his impressive rebounding ability and fluid style on the court. If all goes well, he's bound to make a lot of Cougar fans happy with his decision to play major college basketball.

45 Troy Jones

Center, 6-9, 215, Senior
La Crescenta, California

Troy Jones, a backup center for most of the last two years, hopes to put everything together during the 1975-76 season and help the Cougars get back into the first division in the WAC.

Jones has been very aggressive in coming off the bench to spark the team for the past two seasons.

Troy came to BYU from Crescenta Valley High School in La Crescenta, Calif., where he won all-CIF honors. He led the freshman team in scoring and rebounding in 1971-72, hitting 71 percent of his shots.

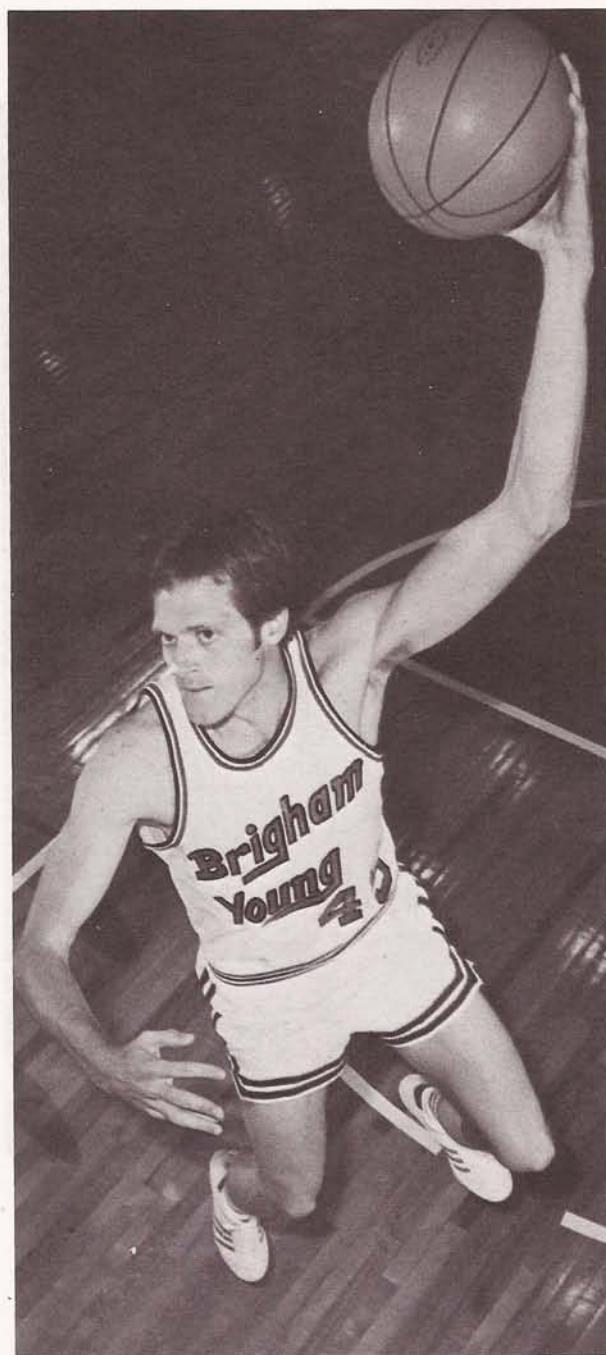

Playing behind Kresimir Cosic the next year, Jones was redshirted and for the past two seasons has played in every varsity game. He is one of the top standing jumpers on the team and likes shooting hook shots.

Troy was born 3-2-53 in Pasadena to Bruce and Barbara Jones. His father coached basketball in the Air Force and was a championship swimmer in his undergraduate days. His mother is a sister to Mel Hutchins, who starred on the 1951 NIT championship team for BYU along with the fathers of Steve Craig and Craig Christensen.

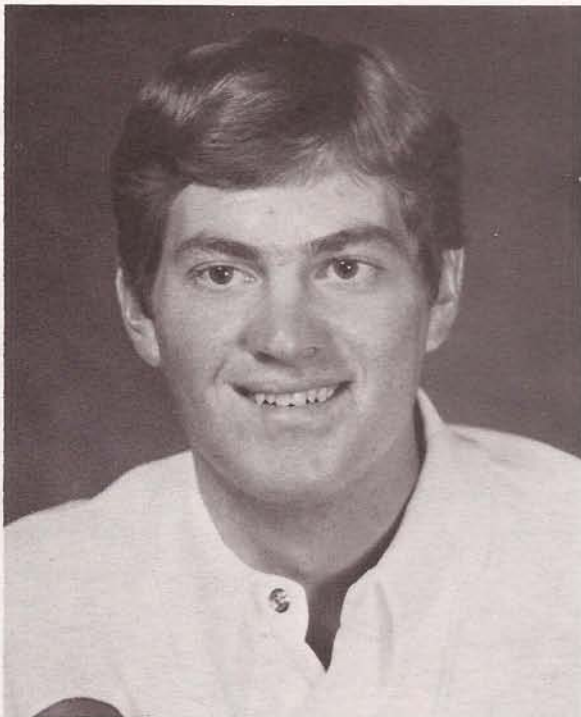

Troy's brother, Scot, was a standout for the University of Utah from 1970-74. Scot is currently in the medical school at Utah and Troy plans to attend med school himself after getting a BYU degree in physiology.

In his spare time Troy plays chess and enjoys the company of his daughter, Mary, who was born in February of 1975. Troy's wife, Joan, was born in Costa Rica.

He is one of four Cougar players who wear contact lenses during games. The others are Mark Handy, Jay Cheesman and Craig Christensen.

Center, 6-9, 205, Junior
Provo, Utah

It might surprise Cougar fans to realize that although Jay Cheesman has been a starter for two years he is only a junior. He was one of the top five scorers as a freshman and earned honorable mention honors in the WAC last season.

Cougar fans consider Cheesman a local product even though he was born (8/24/55) in Miami, Fla. The family moved to the Provo area when he was eight and Jay went on to receive all-state recognition at Orem High School under Harry Anderson, now an assistant coach with the BYU basketball program.

Jay is the son of Paul and Millie Cheesman, who now make their home in Provo. His father is a professor of religion at BYU and has had Jay in several classes. He is the youngest of six children and has a brother, Larry, on the BYU junior varsity roster this season. Larry was the quarterback for the freshman team before going on a church mission to Columbia.

Jay, nicknamed "Chad" by his teammates, is a physical education major who plans to go into coaching. He likes camping and has exhibited several oil paintings he has done.

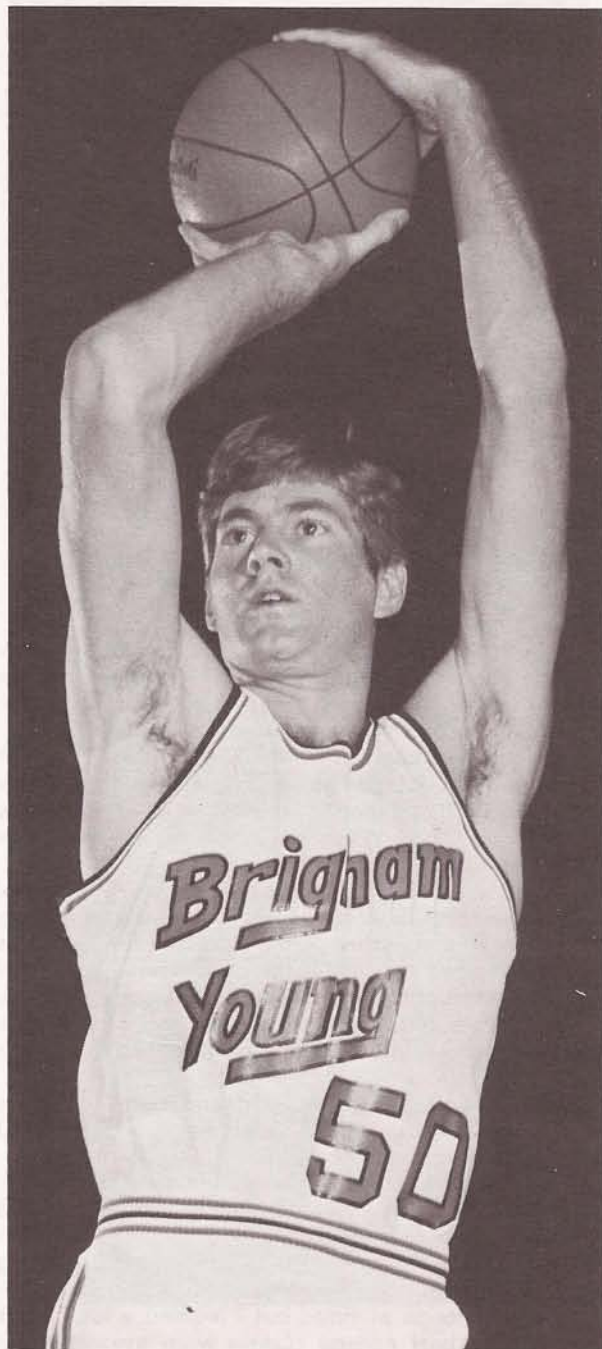

Cheesman added to his basketball experience during the summer at the Pan American tryouts and was chosen to compete for an all-star team of Utah players in South America during the summer.

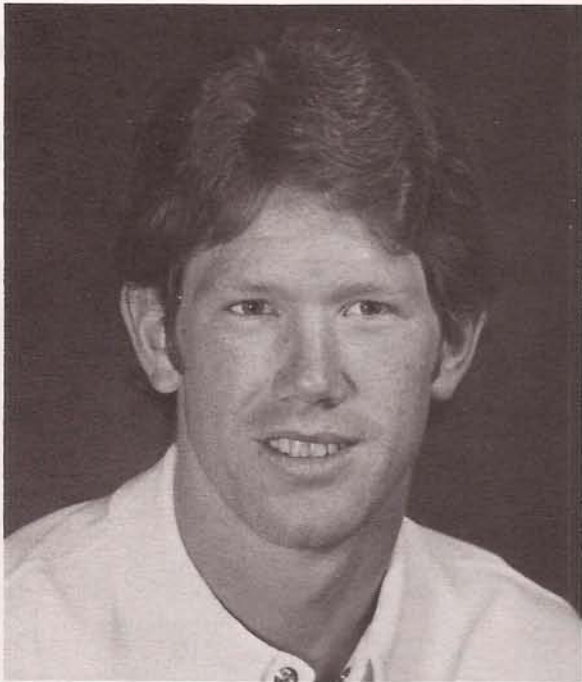

Earlier this year he also spent time in Israel on a business trip with his father, who writes books and is an archaeology expert.

Jay also improved his ability in summer workouts with college players in Los Angeles.

50 Jay Cheesman

52 Mark Handy

Forward, 6-8, 225, Junior
Ogden, Utah

Mark Handy forms half of the Cougars' dynamic duo on the front line. Jay Cheesman and Handy have been regulars since their freshmen year and were the number two and three scorers last year.

Handy was easily the team's top rebounder with an average of 9.1 per game. He led the team in rebounds in 20 of the 27 games and set an arena record with 23 at Wyoming in the next-to-last game of the season.

Mark was an all-state player at Ogden High School and played first base on the baseball team. In college, he has been a mainstay on the front line for two years with his rugged play under the basket. He also scored more than 18 points five times last season.

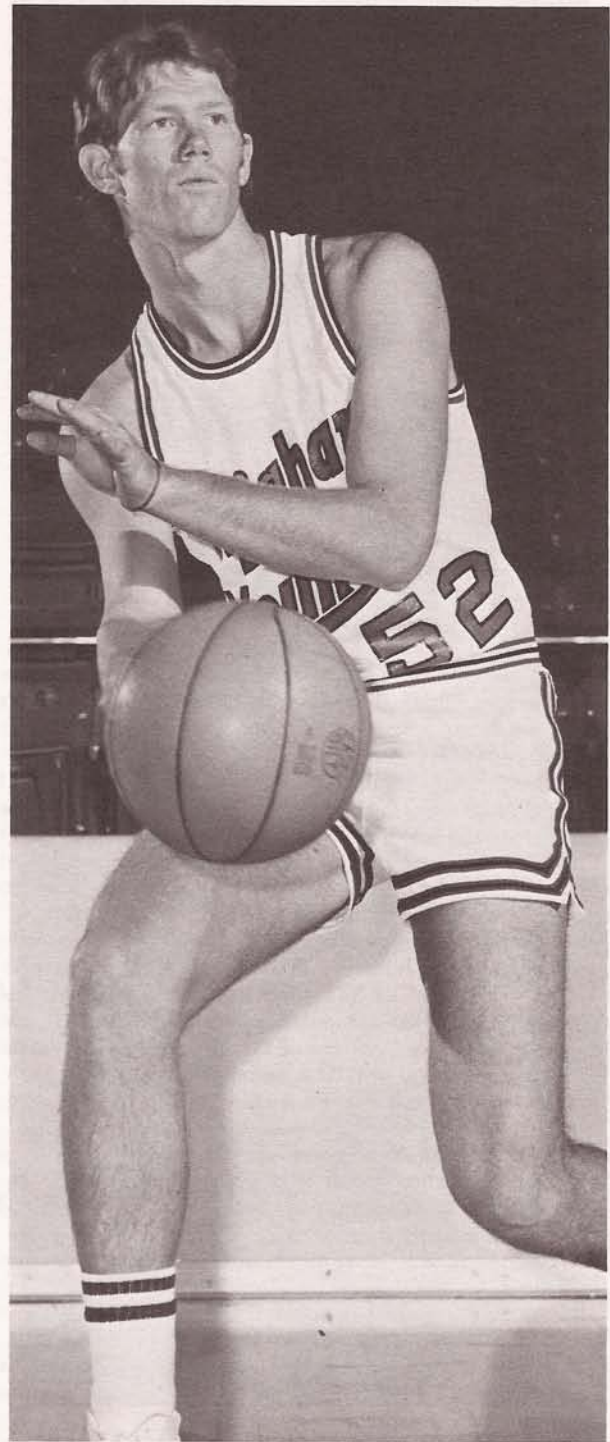

Handy, a business management major, was born 1/27/55 to George and June Handy. His father is a lawyer.

Mark enjoys fishing, hunting and camping in the Wasatch Range near his Ogden home and the BYU campus.

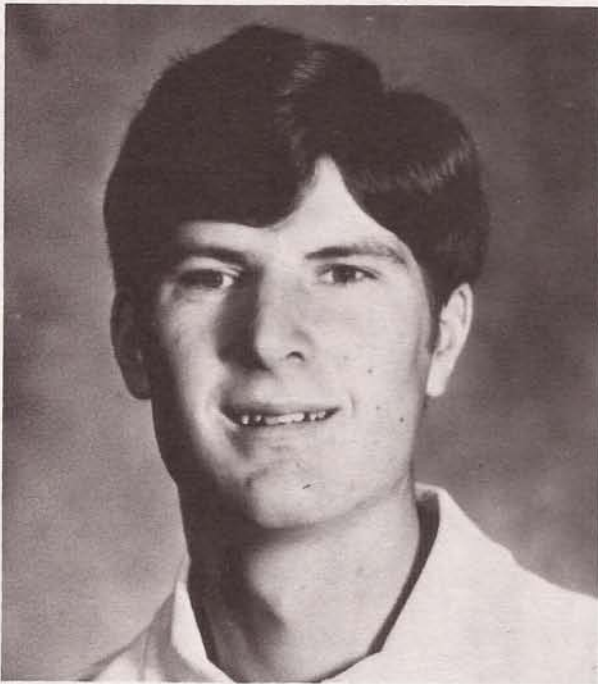

He joined Cheesman during the summer for try-outs with the Pan American team and was picked for a Utah all-star squad to tour South America. For nearly two weeks the two assignments ment practicing morning, afternoon and night.

"It was tough at times but I learned a lot," Mark says. "Our best college players were assembled (at the University of Utah) and playing with them was great experience."

This year Mark is hoping to help the Cougars have a winning season, a fete which has eluded the team during his first two years.

53 Stewart Walkenhorst

Center, 6-11, 200, Senior
Napa, California

Stewart Walkenhorst, the tallest player on BYU's team this season, is one of those rare athletes who is willing to put forth a total effort in practice for the good of the team.

He led the junior varsity in scoring and rebounding two years ago but saw only limited varsity time last season. Although he will be used in a backup role again this year doesn't bother Stewart.

"I like to be affiliated with the team," he explains. "With my scholarship and travel, basketball has been good to me. I'm willing to stay around even though I realize there are others who will start ahead of me."

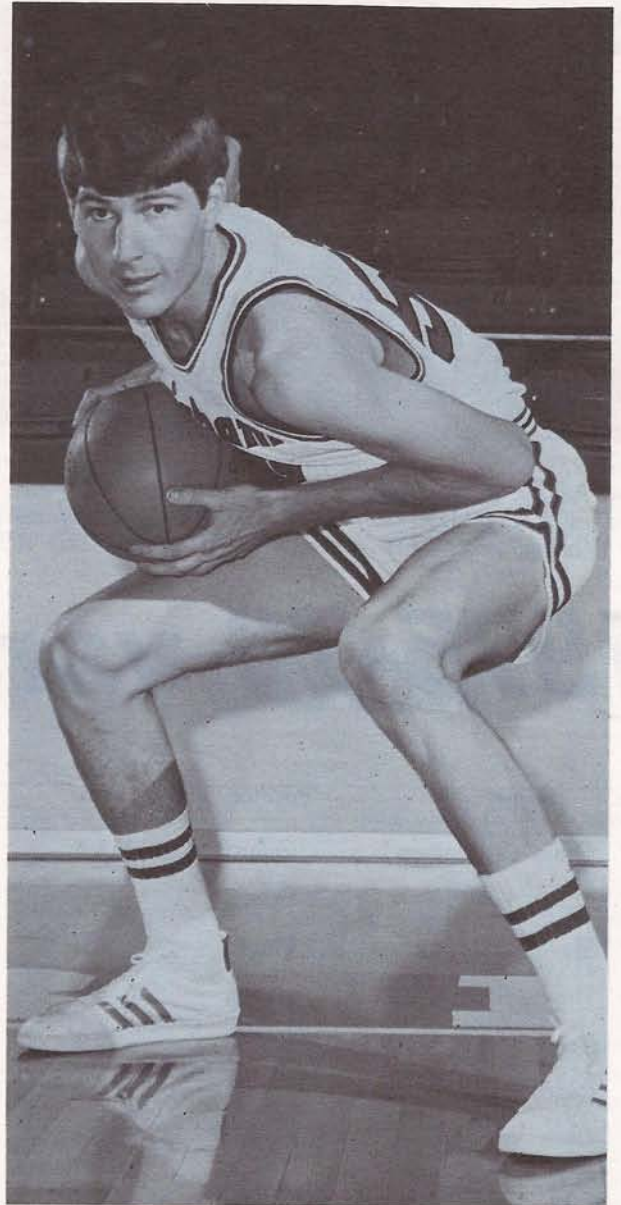

That attitude characterizes his worth to the Cougars—a guy who is willing to dive for loose balls and not stop hustling. In practice sessions, Walkenhorst is counted on to provide opposition for centers Jay Cheesman and Troy Jones. If that's the best way he can help the team, that's fine with him.

Stewart was born 11/20/53 at Mountain Home Air Force Base in Idaho, where he lived until the age of 10. His father then retired from the service and now operates several discount stores in the Napa, Calif., area.

The son of John and Renee Walkenhorst, Stewart gained third team all-state honors his senior year when he averaged 25 points and 17 rebounds per game.

He will graduate in April with a degree in business management. Graduate school or a church mission are possibilities he's considering after that.

In meantime, Stewart is content to fill a reserve role if that's how he can be of the most benefit.

Troy Jones grabs rebound

1974-75 in review

Brigham Young University's 1974-75 basketball season had its peaks and valleys, but "just one more" win somewhere in the 26-game schedule would have prevented the Cougars from slipping to a losing season. As it turned out, the loss to CSU in the season finale left the Cougars with a 12-14 record.

Wins and losses aside, the season, at the end, was overshadowed by a change in coaches. Glenn Potter, who served as head coach at BYU for three years, resigned a few days after the final game, and Frank Arnold, 40-year old assistant on the staff at UCLA, was named as his replacement.

Looking back on the season from the standpoint of expectations, the Cougars finished the year about where they had been picked in the preseason polls—sixth. BYU ended league play with a 5-9 record, and one of the five wins came against nationally-ranked Texas-El Paso. But the Cougars dropped all five games to in-state opponents; one to Weber, two each to Utah and Utah State.

In one particular stretch the Cougars won six of seven games before losing to Arizona State, 110-80, in the WAC season opener. One of the Mountain Cats' top performances came at Albuquerque, where they beat New Mexico, 96-78, ending a long winning streak at home for the Lobos.

Sporting a young team (at times there were four sophomores in the lineup), the Cougars lacked experience. There were only two seniors on the squad—guard Grig Clawson and forward Greg Snow.

Forward Brian Frishman, who was suspended for the last three games of the season, led all scorers at the end of the season with a 15.4 average. But sophomore center Jay Cheesman had a total of 379 points (a 14.6 average). Sophomore forward Mark Handy, who pulled down 23 rebounds in the next-to-last game at Laramie, was the top rebounder with 236 (9.1) for the season.

In terms of points, the Cougars' best performance came at the expense of Rhode Island, a team they beat by a 33-point margin. Biggest loss of the season was a 30-point deficit at home against Arizona State.

As a team, the Cougars shot better from the field than did their opponents (47% to 45%), but were edged in rebounding and scoring overall.

wac basketball

In the 13 years since the formation of the Western Athletic Conference, Brigham Young University has become the foremost basketball power in the league. The 13-year record of the WAC supports this position.

A comparison of the WAC basketball teams and records during this period brings out some interesting points: (a) the ups and downs of some teams, which is a somewhat natural consequence, and (b) the closeness of competition over the long haul, which is indicative of a well balanced basketball program within the conference.

CHAMPIONSHIPS WON

During the 13 years the WAC has been functioning, Brigham Young University has won or shared the championship five times. Starting in 1965, the Cougars have either won outright or shared the crown every other year; 1965, 1967, 1969, 1971, and 1972. In winning outright titles back to back in 1971 and 1972, the Cougars established a conference first. Arizona State has won three titles outright and shared one. New Mexico has won two and shared one. Wyoming has shared the title twice, and Utah has one undisputed championship. Texas-El Paso won the title its first year as a member of the league (1970). Arizona and newcomer Colorado State are the only schools in the conference who haven't cracked the winner's circle.

OVERALL RECORDS

BYU also claims the best win-loss record during this period. Through the ins and outs the Cougars have been able to compile a 89-65 mark. A winning percentage of .578.

WAC HOME-ROAD RECORD

In the minds of many basketball buffs the real test of any team should be the home-road records over the 13 year pull. Here again the Cougars carry the edge among the six original members of the WAC. BYU has won more home games (59) and more road games (25) than any team in the league. Road wins have been notoriously hard to come by in the WAC, yet the Cougars have won over one-half of their road games in the conference play.

OFFENSE, SCORING MARGIN

The Cougars have also established themselves in the area of offense. BYU has led the WAC in scoring five different years (1963, 1964, 1965, 1967, and 1972). They also hold the WAC season scoring average at 92.4 in 1967. The single game records include BYU's 62 points in one half (against Utah in 1966) and the .956 free throw percentage (22-23) against Wyoming two years ago.

A BACK TO BACK SEASON

In winning the 1972 Western Athletic Conference championship the Cougars turned in one of the best balanced performances in the history of the league. BYU led the conference in field goal percentage (.489), offensive average (81.0), free throw percentage (.723) and scoring margin (+9.3 per game). The Cougars also finished third in rebound percentage (.523) and third in team defense (71.7).

The Cougars' 12-2 league record in 1972 tied for the most wins ever by a team in WAC play. They set additional records for most road wins in one season (5), most consecutive wins in one season (8 since tied).

COUGAR BASKETBALL POPULAR

1972 was the opening season for Cougar basketball in the mammoth Marriott Center (capacity approximately 22,700) and more people turned out to watch BYU play than ever before in college ball history. In 12 home games the Cougars attracted a total of 261,815 fans for an average of 21,818 per game. In all, BYU played before a total of 873,788 spectators for an average of 17,133 per contest.

Welcome to Brigham Young University via the 1975-76 BYU Basketball Press Guide. We hope that it will supply you with most of the basic information needed to cover the Cougars this season, but if added information or photos are desired, please contact us.

Press box tickets for all home games will be limited to working members of the press, radio, television, visiting information directors, and college scouts.

Press passes will be issued on an individual game basis and requests must be received in the Sports Information Office no later than three days before the game.

A play-by-play account will be furnished at the end of each half. Complete half-time, final, and individual statistics and other material will be offered both during and after the game.

The main press area is located on the south side of the playing floor with a working press room under the south stands. Radio and scouting booths are located on the concourse level.
